This is to certify that I have used DETTER'S HAIR RESTORATIVE, and I take great pleasure in recommending it to the public as a safe and effectual preparation for the restoration of the Hair. All persons who are in favor of unconditionally sustaining the Administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war until the rebellion is finally suppressed, are requested to meet in their several precincts, (where delegates have not already been choosen) to choose delegates to a County Convention, for Multnomah County, to be held on Saturday, the 7th day of May, A. The Committee recommend one o'clock, Saturday, the 23d of April, as the time for holding Precinct Meetings.

Honest Officers Wanted.

The recent enormous frauds on the Government are arousing general attention to the necessity of having honest and efficient officers in civil, as well as military departments. Sincere patriotism is earnestly seeking for a remedy for the deep seated abuses, which for many years and under every Administration, have opened the way for corruption and wickedness. The evil mainly, as we believe, grows out of the present system of appointments to office, which are bestowed as rewards for political service and for doing all sorts of party work, with very slight reference to the fitness or honesty of the recipient, and thus incompetent and bad men are often found in positions which ought to be filled only by those, who have undoubted capacity and strict integrity. One remedy for this may be found in the system of examination of competitors for office, adopted in European Governments. The experience of France shows that this plan secures great efficiency and honesty in the management of State affairs. An Eastern paper, advocating the wisdom of this system, says:

> What has been successful in other countries may be successful in the United States. Let every official in the Departments at Washington, in every Custom House in the Union, in every Postoffice where the salary is over one thousand dollars, every one of the police officers of the ports be subjected to an examination as to education and as to credentials of character by boards of examiners appointed for that especial purpose, and unless they can pass a successful examination let them be mercilessly rejected. Can any man believe that we should not find it an economical measure—that we would not secure a better reputation for the republican form of government? Let the thinking man take up the subject and agitate upon it. The Visitors of West Point suggest it; let the civil service have the same advantage.

By adopting this plan, other advantages beside increased efficiency in our public offices would be secured. The disgraceful mischiefs, which are the necessary consequence of office-seeking, would be abated, and those who are honest and capable would have a fair chance to compete with the tools of successful politicians. We should not see offices filled with such men as now obtain them, because they worked for the personal elevation of candidates; but merit and fitness would constitute the only claim to positions, which are now the rewards of ignorant and corrupt, but scheming men, who seem to suppose that they deserve public support, on account of adroit political service.

We observe that Mr. Wilson of Massachusetts has introduced a bill to the Senate, requiring Quartermasters, Commissaries and Paymasters to appear before Boards of Examination. We hope it will pass, and that the system may be extended throughout to the civil department, and thus something be done to secure the employment of honest and capable men in the transaction of the business of the Government.

LET IT GO.—There is no valid reason why it is either wise or politic to retain slavery in any part of the United States, if we can find a Constitutional mode of getting rid of it. It has had a full trial in the fairest section of our country, and its chief results have been pride, oppression, ignorance, debauchery, crime and war. The evil tree should be cut down and cast into the fire. Those who defended or apologized for it, because it produced cotton and made money thereby, were suddenly startled, when it turned out brigades of armed men, ready to fight against the Constitution and the Union, and showed that it had no power to enrich its patrons. It furnished another and an undisputable proof that systems of fraud and injustice invariably bring punishment to those, who employ them. Who sows the wind, must reap the whirlwind. Dragon's teeth always yield a crop of blood. Let slavery go then! It is a curse, a crime and a nuisance. Why should honest and patriotic men desire its preservation?

CONSISTENCY.—A really loyal man, who has good sense, will not act with a party, which supports the doctrines of the Democracy. He cannot consistently vote for any one who sympathises with the rebellion or who justifies its leaders in their crusade against the Union. Such action would be inconsistent, absurd and foolish. He cannot help seeing that by voting for those, who suit the master spirits of the rebellion, and whose election would give them satisfaction, he is indirectly, and evidently aiding the enemies of his country, and advancing the interests of those who desire to destroy the integrity of the Government. How then can he doubt as to his duty, which is clear and distinct, and loudly summons him to patriotic action?

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.—A recent Paris correspondent, speaking of French politics, and of the action of the Chamber of Deputies says that "not the least important among the demands of the Opposition members is that the army shall be withdrawn from Mexico and no more conquests be undertaken of countries beyond the sea.

> "The most influential man in either house is Monsieur Thiers, who has lived through the rise and fall of half a dozen Governments, suffered persecution and exile, and been near to being beheaded. He has written a history of the Consulate and the Empire, and in his study or in the forum is considered a host in whatever cause he embarks. He is one of the sixteen deputies of Paris, all opposed to the government, and when the Mexican question was the order of the day, he made a speech which presented the whole matter to the people in a new light. Alas that three-fourths of the people cannot read! It is for this very reason that the Government keeps them in ignorance, that they may have no means of knowing the truth.
> "He said when he saw the Government attempting to establish a monarchy in Mexico, his reason was confounded. A year ago when it was demanded if this was the object of the expedition, the Government speaker answered in a most positive manner that it had no such idea, and now it is proved the crown was offered to Maximilian before a soldier departed for Mexico. He has not a penny in the world, and the expense of fitting him out will be three millions of dollars, and a million a year will be required to support him in a proper imperial style. This is required of the French people, three-fourths of whom cannot yet read, and millions of whom still live in hovels, such as we are sure would be considered uninhabitable by Mexican Indians.—There are more than a million which have no opening but a door; two millions which have two openings, and a million and a half which have three.—This is, of course among the peasantry, of whom there are twenty-five millions. You can judge how many live in comfortable houses, and have comfortable food and clothing. A great proportion share their huts with the cow and pig and chickens, and the manure heap occupies one corner, and serves for a mattress! It is in these hovels that are reared the men who go forth to make war for an idea and civilize the world. If only an army of Yankee parsons and school teachers would go down among the Mexican cities and villages, they would soon create a civilization that would make both French and Spanish chivalry glad to decamp, to say nothing of boorish soldiers and unlettered priests.
> "In California you are made up of every nation under heaven, but the Yankee element prevailed, else order would never have been brought out of that confusion. The English govern Canada, but the inhabitants are French, and they never mingle and never can, and neither prosper as they would with a third of some other element to neutralize and cement them. A Frenchman writing from the banks of the St. Lawrence says he is often asked if Louis XIV is still King of France, and if Madame Maintenon is his wife. They have not advanced a day in half a century, and never will while they belong to England.
> "The Spaniards have never civilized the Indians and the French will do no better. They will build roads, establish Custom House offices and guard them by police. This is all they have done at home in a thousand years.
> "In Algiers not a hundred Arabs have been freed or adopted a French custom. There are thousands of soldiers, prefects and sub-prefects, but no schools and no liberty of any sort. Monsieur Thiers' speech caused the Government to quake a little, and it has promised that the Prince Maximilian shall not depart till the voice of universal suffrage has spoken. If Mexico says through the ballot box that she prefers a Republic, she shall be permitted to abide by her choice. If she prefers the Prince and an Empire she shall have these. This is what Napoleon promises, but who has ever known him to keep a promise? A journal of Cherbourg announces positively that the ship is waiting to take the new made Emperor to his dominions, and I have no doubt he will go."

LOYAL WORDS, WELL SPOKEN.—The recent speech of Green Clay Smith of Kentucky on the Confiscation Bill, was one of the most marked efforts of the present session, in favor of Union and Freedom. General Smith is a State man who are the brightest leading spirits of the Union movement. His speech was truly eloquent in manner, and eminently statesmanlike in matter. It was frequently applauded in the galleries, and the Speaker was obliged to interfere and threaten to have them cleared, so great was the enthusiasm awakened in the audience by the eloquent strains of the speaker. Here is an extract from this splendid effort:

> Sir, your sentinels have been shot and killed while upon the watch-towers of the country; your army has been sometimes almost depleted, and the three hundred thousand new graves that dot the land all over, but too sadly tell the story of yesterday and to-day; the homeless, friendless, and landless together with the weeping and the mourning everywhere, but too plainly tell us of the hour; but the unerring finger of truth and justice points us to the cause, and humanity, honor, christianity and God call for redress and the infliction of punishment, just punishment on those who have done all this. The widows and orphans of the patriot dead of Gettysburg ask at your hands food and raiment. Make the rebels pay it. The armless, legless soldier demands of you support for the future. Get it from the rebels. They caused the war; they undertook to resist and overthrow the very best Government known on earth, and elected the sword as arbitrator. Then let them die by the sword.

Are not these noble words! Such are the utterances of the gallant spirit in the Border States—utterances that are prompted by practical experience in fighting rebellion. Let us give heed to them, and whenever we of the North find ourselves troubled with any conservative qualms concerning confiscation, we may feel strengthened in the spinal column by considering what those who are on the scene of action think of the matter.

CHECKING THE MINING INTERESTS.—The authorities of some of the States, east of the Rocky mountains, are becoming alarmed at the wonderful rush of the people towards the Pacific, and are putting out paper vetoes against any movement. Gov. Stone, of Iowa, has issued a proclamation to prevent the great exodus to the Idaho mines, and thereby avoid the draft. He says:

> No person will be permitted to leave the State in that direction without a proper pass from the Provost Marshal of the district in which he claims to reside; and passes will be granted only to those who make satisfactory proof that they are going out of the State for a temporary purpose, and of their intention to return and be in the State on the said 10th of March.

From this, it would seem that the Governor supposes that the fear of a draft is one cause of the emigration, which is contributing to swell the immense trains, which are on the route to Idaho. Nobody will welcome those, who are unwilling to serve the country, but we hope there will be no disposition to check emigrants who desire to try their fortunes on the Pacific coast. If the Atlantic States were to apply the same rule, where would Iowa be?

Preserving Eggs.

A FARMER.

A Down East editor says that modesty is a quality that highly adorns a woman, but ruins a man.

AN INTERVIEW WITH MRS. POLK.—We were told by a friend that the widow of President Polk was living in Nashville, and that we ought to go and see her residence, and the monument in her front yard, erected over the remains of her husband. We accordingly repaired to Vine street, and soon found ourselves in front of the lady's beautiful mansion. An elderly female in "weed," with a young lady by her side, was standing at the front gate. We ascended the steps, at the top of which they were standing, and asked the elder of the two if this was the residence of Mrs. Polk. She answered that it was. We then said to her, "I think it highly probable, madam, that I have the honor of addressing the very lady now." "If it be any honor, sir, you have," was the response. We expressed ourselves highly gratified at the circumstance, and said that while it was only in our programme to obtain a sight of her residence and the monument of her husband, we had not hoped for such an interview.

We confessed to much astonishment when she told us that from the time of her husband's decease in 1849, to the present hour, she had never been out of her own house to a party or gathering of any kind, except occasionally to a funeral. She had not even taken tea out of her own domicil since that melancholy event. Twice she had dined out while on business with her late husband's executors, when it was almost unavoidable. "I live in and belong to the past," was her remark to us at this interview. I presume at no time since her husband's death has she ever laid aside her "weeds."

The plain monument beneath which lie the remains of James Knox Polk (with appropriate inscriptions on three sides) stands a little to the right of the walk leading from the street to the house, and very near it. This, together with her almost perfect seclusion and continuous mourning for fourteen years, tells strongly with what tenacity and affection and reverence she clings to the memory of her late husband.

Much has been said of Mrs. Polk's secessionism. On this, and a hundred topics that constituted some of the themes of our converse, we shall have but little to say, as with this retiring and truly modest woman, to shun as much as possible the public gaze. We will, nevertheless, give here some portion of our talk on this theme.

"It is a name and an attainment,"

I said to her: "Mrs. Polk, I have heard you accused, since I have been in Nashville, of being a bitter secessionist; how is this?" She quickly and warmly responded in substance as follows: "G[illegible], that is a wrongful accusation. I never was a secessionist and I don't think I ever will be one. I always said there was no excuse for the course taken by my misguided Southern friends. I said that Lincoln was constitutionally elected, and that that election should be acquiesced in by every true patriot. I go, sir, for my Government—my whole Government."

"In other words, Mrs. Polk," we responded, "you go for that United States of which your late honored husband was once the President?"

"Yes, sir," she responded, with marked emphasis, "I do. I know my name has been placed before the public—once at least—in a connection that may have engendered in some minds doubts of my loyalty; but was so placed against my wishes and remonstrances. But inasmuch as it was done for a humane and charitable purpose, I said nothing publicly about it. I do not deny," she added, "that my womanly sympathies are with the South, and that I often catch myself exulting over the success of the Confederate arms, but this is only when my reason is taken prisoner and my judgment temporarily suspended at the affections. I was born in the South. From infancy to old age—for my days now, you know, my surroundings have all been Southern. My relatives, my friends, and more than all my late loved and honored husband, were all of that 'sunny clime.' Is it, then, reasonable to suppose that, 'in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye,' with the frosts of many Winters upon my head, I can throw off, as I would a garment, all the affections, and all the endearing associations, all the prejudices (if you please) of a long life? No! No! this cannot be. And yet, dear sir, notwithstanding all this, I long, and pray, and yearn for a restoration of my distracted country to its former peaceful and happy condition; for a restoration of the 'Union as it was.'"

"Are in the sere and yellow leaf,"—

SLANG OF THE STOCK EXCHANGE.—We publish the following from an exchange for the benefit of the uninformed:

"A Bull" is one who buys stocks on speculation, thinking they will rise, so that he can sell at a profit. It is to his interest to have stocks rise, and he will resort to every means to bring about the desired result.

"A Bear" is one who buys stocks on speculation, thinking they will fall, so that he can buy in for less money to fill his contracts. It is to his interest to break down the market and he will resort to the most desperate means to accomplish his object.

"A Corner" is when the bears cannot buy or borrow the stock to deliver in fulfillment of their contracts.

"A Deposit" is earnest money, lodged in the hands of a third party as a guarantee. "5 up," "10 up," etc., is the language expressing of a deposit.

"Overloaded" is when the bulls cannot take and pay for the stocks they have purchased.

"Short" is when a person or party sells stock when they have none, and expect to buy or borrow them in time to deliver.

"Long" is when a person or party has a plentiful supply of stock.

"A Flyer" is to buy some stock with a view to selling it in a few days, and either make or lose as luck will have it.

"A Wash" is a pretended sale, by special agreement between the seller and buyer, for the purpose of getting a quotation reported.

THE FENIAN BROTHERHOOD.—Bishop Duggan is out in a manifesto in answer to the resolutions recently adopted by the Fenian Brotherhood. His circular closes as follows:

> After this general warning throughout the Diocese, should any prove so perverse as to become members of a body so unequivocally reprobated by the laws of the Church and of civil society, or directly aid and abet by their contributions and presence its unholy objects, they are to be excluded from the sacraments until they perform suitable penance for the scandal given by their conduct, and for the disobedience of which they shall prove themselves convicted.

SHARP BUT COLD BUSINESS.—A Cape Cod Yankee proposes to fit up a steamer to tow icebergs to India, where he can sell them at six cents a pound. Another thinks he can do better by fitting a propelling screw to the iceberg itself, and thus save the expense of ship-building.

COMMISSIONER'S MEETING.—The County Commissioners will hold a session at the Court House to-day at ten o'clock. The business principally relates to bills against the County.

Sunset Cox Used Up—The Best Hit of the Season.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17, 1864.

To-day Sam Cox of Ohio, has received a set back from Washburne of Illinois, which is rather more complete and triumphant than anything of the kind that usually occurs in Congress. I do not often trouble your readers with long extracts, but as in the telegraphic summary of this debate many of the best points are lost, I extract at some length from the speeches as delivered. In the first place I will give you the substance of the speech of an hour's length which Cox delivered to the edification of the Copperhead side of the House, and to the disgust of all decent people in the galleries. Cox had got hold of a circular pamphlet issued by some crazy fanatic, in which the propositions below were advocated—and I give them to you in advance of the Copperhead sheets, as immense quantities of the speech of Cox have been subscribed for and will be scattered abroad over the country.

"1. Since the whole human race is of one family, there should be, in a republic, no distinction in political or social rights on account of color, race or nativity. 2. The doctrine of human brotherhood implies the right of white and black to intermarry. 3. The solution of the negro problem will not be reached in this country until opinion sanctions a union of the two races. 4. As the negro is here and cannot be driven out, there should be no impediment to the absorption of one race in the other. 5. Legitimate unions between whites and blacks could not possibly have any worse effect than the illegitimate unions which have been going on for more than a century at the South. 6. The mingling of diverse races is proved by all history to have been a positive benefit to the progeny. 7. The Southern rebellion is caused less by slavery than by the base prejudice resulting from distinction of color; and perfect peace can come only by a cessation of that distinction through an absorption of the black race by the white. 8. It is the duty of the anti-slavery men everywhere to advocate the mingling of the two races. 9. The next Presidential election should secure to the blacks all their social and political rights, and the progressive party should not flinch from conclusions fairly deducible from their own principles. 10. In the millennial future the highest type of manhood will not be white or black, but brown; and the union of black with white in marriage will help the human family the sooner to realize its great destiny."

Now the substance of Sam Cox's speech was an effort to maintain the assertion that the war for the Union which the Government of the United States is now carrying on for the supremacy of the Constitution, is simply a war for the establishment of the doctrines contained in this circular—a war for amalgamation. And Sam. descanted through a weary hour, though to him a delightful hour upon the horrors of the system of negro equality—rolling the theme like a sweet morsel under the tongue. I alluded, the other day, to the speech of Senator Richardson, of Illinois, which was little else than an effort to check sentiment in the army by filling the public mind with disgust and indignation concerning the objects for which the war is waged. Cox's speech was worse than Richardson's; he stands to-day in ignominious pre-eminence as the meanest, lowest, most traitorous Copperhead on the Jeff Davis side of the House. When Cox had finished his speech, Washburne, of Illinois, introduced an offset to the vile harangue by reading from a book written by Cox himself a few years since—and every Union man who desires to check the spirit of [illegible] enlistments, should cut out the Washburne offset and paste it in his hat. Washburne said:

"We shall not probably have the pleasure at the next Congress of hearing my friend from Ohio rehearse this speech here, because I think, in the light of the recent elections in Ohio, and particularly in the district of the honorable gentleman, I can say to him in the language of Watts, and in the spirit of the utmost kindness,

'You living man, come view the ground,
Where you must shortly lie.'

I desire to show the House what the gentleman from Ohio has written in regard to the "African," in a book entitled "A Buckeye Abroad; or Wanderings in Europe and the Orient. By S. S. Cox." He is describing St. Peters, and says: "In the meantime seraphic music from the Pope's select choir ravishes the ear, while the incense titilates the nose. Soon there arises in the chamber of theatrical glitter"—what? "a plain, unquestioned African! [Laughter] and he utters the sermon in facile Latinity, with graceful manner. His dark hands gestured harmoniously with rounded periods, and his swarthy visage beamed with a high order of intelligence." [Laughter.] What was he? Let the gentleman from Ohio answer: "He was an Abyssinian. What a commentary was here upon our American prejudices! The head of the great Catholic Church surrounded by the ripest scholars of the age, listening to the eloquence"—of whom? "of the despised negro; and thereby illustrating to the world"—What?—"thereby illustrating to the world the common bond of brotherhood which binds the human heart." [Laughter.] Mr. Speaker, I appeal to the House if it does not appear that the author of that pamphlet must have been corrupted by the work of my friend from Ohio, Mr. Cox. But the gentleman goes on to say: "I confess that at first seemed to me a sort of a theatrical mummery, not being familiar with such admixtures in society." That was the first impression of my young and festive friend from Ohio, as he wandered through the gilded corridors of St. Peter's. [Laughter.] "But," he says, "on reflection I discerned in it the same influence which during the dark-ages conferred such inestimable blessings on mankind. History records that from the time of the revival of letters the influence of the Church of Rome had been generally favorable to science, to civilization and to good government. Why? Why, asks my friend from Ohio, is the Church of Rome so "favorable to science, civilization and to good government?" Let the gentleman answer: "Because her system held then, as it holds now, all distinction of caste as odious." [Great laughter.] "She regards no man, bond or free, white or black, as disqualified for the priesthood. This doctrine has, as Macaulay develops in his introductory chapters to his English history, mitigated one of the worst evils of society; for where race tyrannized over race, or baron over villain, Catholicism came between them, and created an aristocracy altogether independent of race or feudalism, compelling even the hereditary master to kneel before the spiritual tribunal of the hereditary bondsman. The childhood of Europe was passed under the guardianship of priestly teachers who taught, as the scene in the Sistine chapel of an ethiop addressing the proud rulers of Catholic Christendom teaches, that no distinction is regarded at Rome save that which divides the priest from the people. "The sermon of the Abyssinian"—that is of the colored person, "the Roman citizen of African descent—in beautiful print was distributed at the door. I bring one home as a trophy and as a souvenir of a great truth which Americans are prone to deny or contemn." [Laughter.] Now, I ask my friend from Ohio if he has still got that trophy and souvenir to bring into this Hall?

The great inquiry in Washington this evening has been, "Where is Sam Cox's trophy and souvenir of the great truth which Americans are prone to deny or contemn?" Where is that sermon? Sam did not reply to the inquiry of Washburne—he was too much used up to do so. He wriggled and twisted and squirmed and winced in his seat during the delivery of Washburne's speech; and Fernando Wood, James Brooks, Voorhees and the Allens, who shook their sides jollily during the painting by Cox, in his speech, of his favorite picture of negro equality, exhibited very elongated countenances, and laughed out of the opposite corners of their coppery mouths as Sunset Sam's heresies were being ventilated to the House—while the Union men enjoyed their laugh hugely.—*Cor. A LONG WAY TO MARKET.—We hear of a farmer from Douglas county, who went up the Columbia on Tuesday, on the Wilson G. Hunt, with his team, [illegible] 2,000 lbs. of bacon. He consumed [illegible] in reaching this city from his [illegible] proceed and from the Dalles [illegible] where he proposes to "sell out." [illegible] strikes us that he is going a long way to market, and we don't believe the price he will realize on his bacon, would justify the outlay of so much, no, half so well as a good crop of grain put upon his farm.

LIBELLED.—The clipper schooner Jenny Jones has been libelled, together with thirty casks of ale, and twenty casks of porter, which it seems was not put in casks of six gallons, as provided by the laws of the United States. The case was before Justice Deady, of the United States District Court, on Tuesday, and the vessel and articles were held. The parties are intending to show that the latter should be excused, and get it released.

TRACY & KING'S CABINET.—The mineralogical cabinet of Messrs. Tracy & King received some valuable acquisitions yesterday, from the "Daly" and "Columbia" leads of [illegible]. This is a favorable time for starting valuable cabinets of mineral, and these gentlemen have commenced right, for obtaining a collection of great worth.

THEATRICAL.—The play at Willamette Theatre last night was admirable, and was witnessed by an appreciative audience. The performance never lags with Mrs. Hayne, and supported by such an excellent troupe, with Miss Gass and Mr. Waldron at the head, an audience can never be otherwise than satisfied. The performance closed at an early hour last evening, but everybody received their money's worth of interest.

THE TELEGRAPH.—Communication is still cut off beyond Salem. The damage done to the line by the recent storm is immense, so far as known. Seven trees were blown across it between Aurora and Salem. Mr. S[illegible] der came from Vancouver yesterday to fix up the line and put it in order.

COUNTY COURT.—The April term of the County Court, Judge Marquam presiding, commenced its session on Monday, and has been continued daily. There are some eight cases on the docket, besides the usual amount of Probate business.

STOCK OPERATIONS.—The Board of Stock Brokers held its regular meeting on Tuesday evening, but there was not a full attendance, and business was limited. The operations for the week have been mainly governed by the quotations.

RECORDER'S COURT.—H. N. Overy was arrested on a charge of being drunken, noisy, and disorderly, for which he received a fine of $[illegible] and costs—in default was locked up for [illegible] days.

THE RESCUE.—The steamer Rescue made a trip to the Cascades yesterday, taking sixty head of mules, with all the arrangements for packing, and about 25 passengers.

"A STORY OF DUELLING," continued on the 4th page of this paper from Tuesday morning, will be found correct. An error in making up the "form" caused bad work of it yesterday.

IT IS SELDOM THE LOT THAT AN INVENTION of any description, in any age of the world, has stood the test of time and competition against a host of formidable rivals with such unqualified triumph as has been realized by the celebrated Grover & Baker Sewing Machine. The card published by this firm to-day in our paper is a record of victories that may well make them proud, and the tens of thousands who are using them happy in the consciousness that, in selecting this instrument in preference to all others, they are universally sustained by the best judges in the land. Almost any machine would receive an award of some kind by being generally exhibited wherever competition is invited; but this has carried off the palm, not only by the receipt of one, but more generally of three first premiums, in a dozen States of the Union, in a single season. The Grover & Baker Machine obtained the highest premiums for the best family sewing machine, the best manufacturing machine, and the best machine work this year, in the State Fairs of New York, Vermont, Iowa, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Ohio, and Pennsylvania. In other words, the Grover & Baker Machine has taken the first premium wherever it has been exhibited, without a single exception.—Philadelphia Press.

CELEBRATED

CONCLUSIVE PROOF
OF THE EFFICACY OF
HOSTETTER'S
STOMACH BITTERS!

PROTECTIVE MEDICATION

Great Truths
—IN—
SMALL COMPASS!

WHAT THE BITTERS ARE.

A pure, delightful, Vegetable Balm,
To cheer the spirits and the nerves to calm,
Protect the system from Miasma's bane,
Rouse torpid Nature and the strength sustain.

THEIR INGREDIENTS.

Juices of plants, roots, barks, of virtues rare,
By chemic art expressed with patient care,
And the mild spirit of the soundest rye—
Purest of all diffusive stimuli.

RESULTS OF THEIR USE.

Digestion rallies, appetite revives,
The food assimilates, the patient thrives,
Dyspepsia vanishes, with all its throes,
And peaceful sleep succeeds disturbed repose.

EFFECTS ON THE LIVER.

The bilious sufferer, languid, listless, pale,
Physicked for years, perhaps, without avail,
Finds in the BITTERS all he asks or needs,
And lives to smile at doctors and their creeds.

OPERATION ON THE BOWELS.

Relaxed, constricted, or the seat of pain,
These organs should not, for one day, remain.
The cause of each extreme you can expel—
The BITTERS tone and regulate as well.

EFFECT ON THE DEBILITATED.

The flaccid muscles firmness soon acquire,
The frame gains flesh, the eye resumes its fire,
Strength to the limbs, hope to the heart returns,
Till staff and crutch the convalescent spurns.

BROKEN CONSTITUTION.

The constitution tried by pain or care,
Or wild indulgence, is not repair:
The genial Tonic, as the healthful dews
Quickens parched herbs, its wasted power renews.

CHILLS AND FEVER.

Damp, cold, exposure to the malarious fog,
Brings on of ills a fearful catalogue;
But intermittents, whatso'er their kind,
HOSTETTER'S BITTERS scatter to the wind.

SICK HEADACHE.

This torment dire, that all enjoyment kills,
Yields not to pungent scents or drastic pills,
'Tis from the stomach that it takes its rise;
Tone with the BITTERS, and the anguish flies.

WANT OF APPETITE.

Without due nourishment life's pulses wane,
The blood grows thin and dullness clouds the brain;
But this Elixir sets the system right,
And "Good Digestion waits on Appetite."

THE BITTERS AFTER SICKNESS.

Exhausting fever leaves its victim low,
And, unassisted, Health's return is slow;
Then with the Bitters weakened Nature aid,
For in each drop vitality's conveyed.

AS A GENERAL PREVENTIVE.

By night and day, on river, sea or land,
In instant peril of disease we stand;
But its dread arrows harmless seem to glide
Past all with this invigorant fortified.

IMPURE WATER, ETC.

Roam through the world, through every climate range,
Here is the antidote 'gainst every change,
Water impure it tempers, and inures
Men in all hardships to all temperatures.

SEA SICKNESS.

Who has not felt how feebly words essay
The qualms one feels on shipboard to portray?
Dread them no more, defy old Neptune's power,
The Bitters cure the nausea in an hour.

AN UNADULTERATED TONIC.

Of all the liquors borne across the sea
Not one—mark that—from acrid poison's free,
These Bitters stand 'mid stimulants alone,
Powerless to irritate, though prompt to tone.

A MILD APERIENT.

Remember, too, aperient root and herb,
Are blent with those that relaxation curb
In this rare mixture; give this fact due weight,
That while the Bitters tone, they regulate.

A GENTLE CORRECTIVE.

If on the stomach food to acid turns,
And pungent gas the inner membrane burns,
This grand corrective soon removes the ban,
And from the heartburn frees the inner man.

A SAFE AND GENTLE ANODYNE.

Why not with all the opiates dispense,
That shake the nerves and paralyze the sense,
When these rare BITTERS soothe both mind and frame,
Inviting both to yield to slumbers claim?

THE WORLD'S OPINION.

Touching the BITTERS, this grand fact is clear,
Their fame fills all the Western Hemisphere.
Known in all lands, washed by its oceans twain,
HEALTH, HOPE and VIGOR, follow in their train!

AVOID COUNTERFEITS.

HOSTETTER'S BITTERS share the common fate
Of all things good. Impostors imitate,
Of these beware. Discreetly use your eyes,
From honest houses purchase your supplies.

CAUTION!
The Government Endorsement.

In order to guard against the impositions, the public are requested to take especial note of the beautifully engraved proprietary stamp, through which the Government of the United States officially authenticates every bottle of HOSTETTER'S BITTERS. This shield, thrown by the Government over the proprietors and the public for their joint protection, is placed conspicuously across the cork and over the neck of each bottle, and cannot fail to strike the eye of the most casual observer. Nothing that purports to be HOSTETTER'S BITTERS can be genuine unless the stamp is there.

It is also proper to state that the BITTERS are sold exclusively in glass, and never under any circumstance by the gallon or the barrel. Impostors and imitators are abroad, and the only safeguard the public have against them is to see that the Bitters they buy bear the engraved label and note of hand of Messrs. HOSTETTER & SMITH, and the stamp above mentioned.

A Big Thing on Ice

It has been truly said that in every crowd, however small, there is always to be found one man to act as Sir Oracle of the party—a man who has heard too much to ever again be astonished or surprised at the changes and novelties of ordinary life

Such a man we had on board the America—just in from Panama, and he furnished his full quota of food for saws among the fun-loving passengers Our wise man (whom we will call Van Duzen, though that is a long way from his name,) informed the passengers at the commencement of the voyage that he had made the trip on seven previous occasions, and was therefore prepared to give all information required relative to the peculiarities of the tides, the Islands, the fruits, and the natives of the tropics

"Now, then, boys," says Van, gracefully cocking his jaunty straw hat over his right eye, "now then, boys, any time you want to be posted on the particulars of this trip, you just come to me! I've been over this route eight times, and—"

"Excuse me," says N w n, "but at what hour of the day is it safe to eat oranges?"

"In the morning only in the morning" was the reply, and Van smiled like a young king, receiving the announcement of a first born. "Yes, gentlemen, if you want to avoid sickness, you—"

"Look here, Van," shouted W h b n, "is there any dependence to be placed in the integrity of such a promiscuous set of passengers as crowd themselves on a California steamship?"

"Not a bit of it," says Van, complacently stroking his whiskers, and giving a smile of encouragement to those thirsting for knowledge No, no dependence can be placed in the integrity or virtue of California passengers! Why, gentlemen, during one of the trips that I made over this route, I remember that there were two young ladies on board who were daughters of a clergyman in Brooklyn, and—"

"O, blast the Brooklyn minister and his daughters!" screamed Charlie, "you've told that story seventeen times since we left land, and you never yet brought the young ladies out twice alike, and I motion that you now give us something new."

"On what island is it that the natives gather the vegetable ice?" inquired W h b n, looking as solemn as a Camanche Indian at a midnight funeral

"Vegetable Ice!" slowly gasped Van—unwilling to acknowledge his ignorance on any subject "Vegetable ice is I think—"

"Yes," chimed in W h b n, "vegetable ice is peculiar to the tropics, and is found in small quantities on all of the Pacific Islands, but it s only raised as an article of commerce on Ice Island, near the south-western bluffs of Guatemala, where the captain says he will stop a couple of hours this afternoon if the passengers wish to purchase fifty dollars' worth of the ice"

Now as Van was economically opposed to subscribing a dollar for luxuries, or the loss of an hour by delay, he resolved at once to oppose the ice speculation, and to nip the thing in the bud, and he therefore opened as follows

"Gentlemen, I oppose the whole thing, for two reasons, first, we haven't the time to lose, and second, this vegetable ice is one of the worst things that could be brought on board the ship. It will be sure to create an epidemic which will carry off dozens of our passengers before we can reach San Francisco"

"O, that's all gammon," shouted B f d "It s very easy to circulate unjust and injurious reports against vegetable ice when a man is too penurious to subscribe a dollar for the pleasure or comfort of his female companions, but, thank God, there are passengers enough on board who know the medical virtues of the ice and who think less of a dollar than they do of the luxuries of iced beverages in the tropics"

"How does this ice grow?" asked R d n, winking from the north western corner of the larboard eye like a toad in a thunder shower, and waiting for an answer like a thirsty man looking into an ice pitcher

"It grows on bushes about the size of apple trees," says B r l y, drawing up his tall form like a liberty pole on election day "It s a beautiful sight to a man who loves fruit. The ice forms in cups about the size of cocoanuts, and it melts when placed in water very much like fresh snow"

At this state of the joke, one of the party takes Van by the arm and mysteriously leads him off to the other side of the ship and tells him that some of the passengers are getting up a scheme to mob him because he is too penurious to pay his share toward purchasing fifty dollars worth of the ice

With a look of injured innocence, and an air of supreme contempt for filthy lucre, Van re entered the circle and exclaimed

"Gentlemen, here's my dollar! I don't care a cuss for the money, but I know that the ice is unhealthy, and that you'll all be sorry you got it. This is my eighth trip over this route, and on one occasion we had two daughters of a Brooklyn clergyman on board, who—"

But Van was here interrupted by the finance committee who reported thirteen dollars collected among the passengers for a supply of vegetable ice!

In the evening the amount was expended for the benefit of all concerned, when the sell was explained to the uninitiated, and Van was requested to tell us once more the thrilling story of the Brooklyn minister and his two daughters, and to give us a scientific discourse on the healthfulness of vegetable ice

Van takes the joke very philosophically, but swears that when he makes his ninth voyage across the Isthmus, he'll shoot the first man that says "Vegetable Ice"—Golden Era.

"Grandfather," said a very little boy the other day, "how old are you?"

The old gentleman, who had been a soldier, and who was much under the ordinary size, took the child upon his knees and said "My dear boy, I am ninety five years old, but why do you ask?"

The little fellow, with the importance of a Napoleon, replied "Well, it appears to me you are remarkably small of your age"

When Woman becomes an Angel.—It is the most momentous question a woman is called upon to decide whether the faults of the man she loves will drag her down, or whether she is competent to be his earthly redeemer. When a woman, called upon to decide that question, answers that she will abide the consequences, may she not be called an angel?

Jean Paul thus cautions young girls "The young men fall on their knees before you, but remember it is but as the infantry before the cavalry, that they may conquer and kill or, as the hunter, who, on bended knees, takes aim at his victim"

Wife and Home —Far sweeter music to a true woman than the tones of a harp or piano touched by her hand, are the cheerful voices of husband and children, made joyous by her presence

Some are very entertaining for an interview, but after that they are run out, on a second meeting they are very flat and stale, like hand organs, all their tunes are played out.

The Knout —The knout had a short, massive handle and a heavy leather lash about eight feet long. It resembled those tremendous whips with which the Cossacks of the Ukraine when they have brought a wolf to bay, can kill him at a single blow The lash was formed of leather, so as to give two sharp edges along its whole length, and sometimes bound with wire thread the end terminated in a little hook It had no handle but one end was left supple, so that the executioner could wind it around his wrist At every blow the sharp edges of the still curved lash fell on the criminal s back and cut him as with eight yards of pliant double edged sword The executioner, subtle in his cruelty had learnt not to roughly withdraw the lash, but to draw it toward him so as to remove long flaky bands of flesh, the hook being devised with devilish ingenuity for this detestable purpose The lash was also purposely long, that it lapped around the body and cut deep into the chest at the same time that it destroyed the whole of the back. Indeed, it was well known that the executioner could if he chose kill any man at one blow of the knout by lapping him round the lungs and heart but as the "Bourreau" was generally bribed, he seldom puts forth his whole force When the knout was honestly used the criminal if he survived the first blow usually fainted at the third and died about the fifth A ukase of Peter the Great fixed the maximum of blows at 101 (the Russians having a superstitious respect for odd numbers) but whether the knout became heavier, or the Russians more effeminate, the 101 blows which, of course, implied death, were never given in the Emperor Nicholas' time

Patience of Job.— Upon this congenial topic Josh Billings thus eloquently discourses

Everybody is in the habit uv bragging on Job, and Job did hev a considerable uv a pile uv patience, that's a fac but did he ever kepe a district skule at 8 dollers a month and bored rownd? Did hee ever reep lodged otes doun hill on a hot da, and hev all gallus buttens bussed off to wunst? Did he ever hev the jumpin tuthaik, and be made to tend the babey, while his wife was over to Ole Pet kineces tu a tee squawl? Did he ever git up in the morning orful dri and fut it 3 myles after brekfist tu git a drink, and then find that the man kept a temprance hows? Did he ever undertaik tu milk a kikin heffer, with a booshey tail, in phli tyme, owt in the lott? Did he sett doun on a lyter ov kytens in the owld arme chare, with his summer panterlets on, without saing—Oucher? Did he ever wock fore myles tu c his sweetthart, when it wuz ez kowld ez jayhue, and after noken et the dore fer haf a nour, c her luk out the winder tu c who it wuz, and then hev tu gow hoam without gyten in? If he kud doo awl theze thyngs, and giv prayz at the saim time, awl I have tu sa iz, Bulley for Job!

Me or My Mother —A very talented young man made the acquaintance of a Quaker gentleman and his lady. The Quaker had a fine daughter and also a fine library, the books from which he freely loaned to the young man, who generally came in the evening to return them when he supposed the daughter would be at home She often exchanged the books for him and had a friendly chat with him One evening he came as usual, and the young lady met him at the door. She was dressed to go out, and said

"Who would you like to see, me or my mother? I was about to call on a friend If my mother will answer your purpose, please to walk into the dining room, but if you desire my company, I will postpone my visit till another time"

The young man hesitated and stammered

"He—he—did not want to—to detain her from her engagement, but if she had not been going out, he would have enjoyed her company"

"All right," she rejoined, and accordingly taking off her bonnet, they passed a very pleasant evening

That question, "Who do you prefer to see, me or my mother?" settled the matter The result was he soon proposed, and they were afterwards married

A Repentant Georgian —Captain J M Streetman, Fifty sixth Georgia Regiment, is out in a card urging his fellow soldiers to desert His reason for this is, that "the rebellion must finally fail, better that it should do so soon and before the last fellow in the ranks is sacrificed to gratify the obstinacy and pride of the rebel leaders, who intend, in the last extremity, to save themselves by flying to a foreign country, which you cannot do, for the want of means of living there" The Captain further says "You can make your way through the lines as I have done, and upon reaching the Federal pickets you are safe You will have free transportation wherever you choose to go, and the Government will give you employment in such business as may suit you, at from thirty to forty dollars, real money per month, and boarding thrown in Your officers are trying to deceive you, that you may be kept to suffer and die for their benefit There is no danger of being put into the Federal army I have General Grant's published order before me, in which he says 'To avoid the danger of recapture of such deserters by the enemy, they will be exempt from military service in the armies of the United States' Fellow soldiers and friends, be no longer deceived and used up, but come away, where you can have a chance to live and prosper."

Hark from the Tombs!—It is related in the Richmond papers that the rebel General Toombs was recently in the cars at Savannah without a passport. The proper officer called upon him for that interesting document, when Mr Toombs fell back upon his dignity, said he was General Robert Toombs, that he owed allegiance to Georgia and no other government that his State did not require passports and that he would not produce one The officer informed the irate patriarch as to his duty in the premises, and in default of the passport ejected the blusterer from the cars A crowd collected, and Toombs proceeded to address them, stirring up their pure minds to "mutiny and rage" and uttering disloyal and treasonable sentiments General Beauregard was in Savannah, and learning the full facts of the case, placed Robert under arrest, where he was at last accounts In what esteem such a silly ranter as Toombs is held is evident from the remark of an old lady in the cars "Well, well,' said she, "they have got Bob Toombs I heard him say he'd swallow the blood of all the Yankees that came South Well, he can swallow all he sheds!"

Answered Well —A young man recently presented himself for examination as Assistant Engineer in the Navy. Among other questions, the following was asked of him —'Suppose you had built an engine yourself performed every part of the work without assistance, and knew that it was in complete order, but when put into a vessel the pump would not draw water, what would you do?' The young man promptly replied, 'I should go to the side of the vessel and ascertain if there was any water in the river'' Guess they let him pass

Give away what you can part with throw away nothing, you know not how much you may miss it

A Story of Dueling.

(Concluded)

What then must be the exuberant the extravagant elation of the Maitre d Armes en champions upon the present occasion He is not a talker in his words may be few but his flowing mien his countenance his demeanor—unconceivable self celebrating—are they not eloquent? If they might say to the whole cafe "Hé yez Messieurs! regardez moi! last night you saw me insulted abused outraged; to night you see me here beaming buoyant, supreme Last night you saw me stained, to night you see me cleansed What changes a little day brings forth!—what a perfect cleanser is a steady hand! what a burnisher of dimmed honor is the bright the swift the glorious rapier! And the insulter the avenger the fiery young man—he isn't here to-night how was this? Heyday! the beardless young man from Lyons did not see him here to night—where can he be? &c, &c

Indeed the elevation of the victor permits him to be generous He admires the dead man s courage, he acknowledges that his fencing was excellent his attack irreproachable

'My dear Maurice,' (speaking to his friend in particular and to the cafe in general) 'my dear Maurice he punished me with the force of a Conde And his defence—was it not impregnable?—could anything penetrate it?—Pardieu! it was a cuirass a wall!'

'Ah then' said Maurice, "but my friend Achille s coup de grace"

Achille smiled his soul was tickled: but suddenly the smile was changed to an expression of intense horror the blood of his cheek was blighted to the color of a corpse the lustre seemed to have left his eyes, which were wide and dilated; he had partially arisen from his chair, and now appeared frozen in—the attitude—a painful, unnatural one

Seeing the aspect of his friend, Maurice followed the stony glare of those frightened eyes and then remained motionless, himself scarcely less confounded

The frequenters of the cafe, standing up and sitting down, were equally impressed The clinking of the glasses at the bar came to a sudden cessation All were silent and lifeless Had a quick enchantment chilled the gay cafe? All eyes were turned in one direction All faces bore a likeness to each other, so fearful was the breathless anxiety of each.

One young dandy had been in the act of lighting a cigar and the lighted paper burnt up against his arrested hand, and went out without his moving, or evincing any sensation of pain

"Parbleau! the beardless young man!" gasped the Maitre d Armes

Brave, though a bully, he was the first to recover Seizing a decanter, he brimmed a tumbler with brandy and drank it down like water

Sure enough, there, to all appearance, stood the young man who had given himself the name of Henri Duval, and who had been put to death on the morning of that day by the Maitre d'Armes, looking as he had looked the night before, with the exception that he now wore a long cloak and was without a hat

"Is it possible my presence—that of a perfect stranger—can have created this extraordinary sensation? Excuse me, gentlemen, I am in search of a duelist named Achille de Beaumont—do I behold him in this gentleman?"

"You do" said the Maitre d'Armes "May I have the liberty to inquire if Monsieur bears the name of Duval?'

'That is my name Monsieur"

"And may I also take the liberty to inquire if Monsieur is the—the brother of a certain Henri Duval?"

'No, Monsieur, not a brother, but a near relation"

Achille breathed more freely, and the cafe breathed more freely But without another word the young man stepped up to the table, filled a glass and emptied it in the face of the Lieutenant

The latter drew a napkin over his face in a patient mechanical way, and there was something like dignity in his demeanor when he arose

"Enough," said he, "the insult was unnecessary, Monsieur What shall it be?"

'The same as be—rapiers, of course," said the young man

'Time?"

"The present"

'Place?"

'There is a little wood on this side of the Seine, a hundred yards to the left, through the trees, as you approach it, going northward from here, is an open glade—let the place be there"

Achille shuddered, but his tones were even "It is well | Allons!'

The cafe was vacated in a moment. By many ways the crowd hastened to be present at the finale of this strange quarrel The cafe itself was not remote from the suburbs, and barely half a league from the spot indicated, so that there was but little addition to the crowd when it arrived there, and the time was so brief that the event gained but little further publicity before its occurrence

When the last man of the panting crowd arrived he saw the stranger standing in the centre of the little opening, completely environed by spectators He was calmly awaiting his opponent, who was rapidly divesting himself of his coat and vest, with the assistance of Maurice His preparations were few When they were completed, he took his sword from Maurice, and advanced.

'Will not Monsieur take off his cloak?" said he, politely,

A shake of the head was the response

'And has Monsieur no second?"

'I need none, there are many witness, I am ready"

He shook his right arm free from the folds of his cloak, which was fastened at the throat A bare weapon was in his hand, and the conflict commenced

It seemed unequal Achille had all his skill—was as cool as consummate as ever before but his vigor had departed his attack had but little fire and even his matchless guard was hardly proof against the sturdy valor of the foe

Once they almost closed. It was nearly night, and the sparks flew from their weapons in showers They burst apart and staggered apart and staggered back to breathe—Achille with his left arm bleeding

'Bon Dieu! are you hurt?' whispered Maurice

"It is nothing—a mere touch—I do not feel it"

'O Achille my own Achille! you must push more fiercely or you are lost—this is to the death!'

He took the advice, and went forward like a gladiator There was a terrific struggle, involving pure physique as well as skill and the Maitre d Armes was rushing to the bare bosom of his foe when quick as thought, the latter threw his cloak wide open with his left arm, as if for a fairer target but Achille saw something in there which appalled him and he reeled back a step letting his weapon sink a little—the next instant the young man s rapier passed through his breast the hilt rapping up against the ribs quite sharply

Achille sank down on the turf to die He felt something pass over his heart like a heavy hand—his tongue was dry, his ears were filled with strange murmurings, and tinklings, and languid pulses of sound, but he raised himself on his elbow and pointed through the mist which was before his eyes then sighed again and fell back in ruins

What became of the stranger it was never known He was not seen after his opponent fell and his disappearance was a mystery, for the throng of bystanders made a complete hedge round the arena, and no one saw or felt him pass through. It is true Maurice swore that, when the young man had flung back his cloak, he had revealed a bare bosom and a sword thrust wound through the heart of it, scarcely a day old thus identifying him with the young man who had been slain in the morning

But then, Maurice did not repeat this assertion many times—in Paris, at least; for, now that his friend was dead that very night before bedtime he was the recipient of six challenges and by daylight the poor wretch was fleeing towards Spain in dismay.
